Q2. Discuss the education problems in Pakistan.

Answer

Education Problems in Pakistan

Education is an essential investment for human and economic development. It is considered as the cheapest defense of a nation but unfortunately it is one of the biggest problems in Pakistan. The education system of Pakistan is rotten to the core. The literacy rate in Pakistan is recorded as about 55% in 2012-2013.

At present, the education sector is facing crisis just like other major sectors of the country. Following are the major problems in education system of Pakistan:

The educational system of the country is based on different mediums which divides the students in two segments. Mostly private schools are English medium while the Government schools are Urdu medium. Regional differences are also a major cause for a poor educational system in Pakistan.

Gender discrimination is very common in Pakistan. People are very conservative and they don’t want their girls to go to school and get education. Due to this, the ratio of boys and girls in primary schools is 10:4.

Poverty is another factor that prohibits the parents to send their children to private school where the quality of education is high. Poor people get their children admitted to Government schools. The teachers in Government schools are not professionally trained. They even don’t take lectures and waste the precious time of the students.

The allocation of funds for education sector by the Government of Pakistan are very low: only 2% of the total GDP. Government should increase this rate to improve the quality of educational system.

Education is very important for the development of every country. It is the only cure for the disability of a country because today’s students are common nation builder. Government of Pakistan should take steps to remove the above mentioned problems so as to improve the quality of educational system of the country.

Q3. Elaborate the educational structure of Pakistan.

Answer

Education structure of Pakistan

Education in Pakistan is divided into five levels:

• Elementary school (grades 1 through 5)
• Middle school (grades 6 through 8)
• High school (grades 9 through 10)
• Higher Secondary School (grades 11 to 12)
• Higher Education

All academic education institutions are administered by provincial governments. The federal government provides assistance, primarily in curriculum development, accreditation, and partial funding of scientific research.

In Pakistan, there are both public and private schools.

Pre-primary Education Early childhood education is designed for 3-5 years, and usually consists of three steps:

• Playgroups
• Nurseries
• Kindergartens

After the pre-school children are transferred to the primary school.

Primary education

As part of the curriculum students studied English, mathematics, science, and art. Sometimes students are taught the basics work on the computer.

Secondary education

It is generally accepted, that secondary education starts at grade 9 and lasts for four years. At the end of 10th grade students pass the standardized test, which is under the auspices of the regional council of intermediate and Secondary Education (BISE). In the case of successful completion of this test, they receive a Secondary School Certificate (SSC). At the end of grade 12 they will have another standardized test and the successful delivery of its student receives a Higher Secondary (School) Certificate (HSC). The most common alternative to these certificates is a certificate of general education, where the certificates of SSC and HSC level replaced Ordinary Level (or O Level) and Advanced Level (or A Level), respectively. Other possible certificates include IGCSE, which replaces the SSC. Certificate GCE O Level, IGCSE and GCE AS / A Level controlled by the British examination boards.

Higher education

Students can attend college or university for the degree of Bachelor of Arts (Bachelor of Arts (BA)), BSc (Bachelor of Science (BSc)) or a degree in Commerce / Business Administration (Commerce / Business Administration (B.Com / BBA)). There are two types of bachelor’s degree in Pakistan – the successful graduation and graduation with honors. The first type requires a two-year training and includes the study of electives (chemistry, mathematics, economics, statistics) and the compulsory subjects (such as English). Undergraduate with honors requires three-four-year study.

After receiving the certificate of HSC students can acquire knowledge in engineering, medicine, dentistry, veterinary medicine, law, architecture. Duration of training in these specialties is 4-5 years. For the title of Bachelor of technology, students need to unlearn 3 years and receive a diploma “Diploma of Associate Engineer”, and then another 4 years to learn the technical program.

Q4. Why Urdu is called the national language of communication of Pakistan?

Answer

Urdu - National Language of Pakistan

Introduction

Urdu enjoys the status of being the mother tongue of 80 millions people of the world, mostly residing in two countries Pakistan and India. It also enjoys the status of being the national language of Pakistan and one of the national languages of India. It is also the official language of different states of India like Uttar Pradesh, Indian controlled Jammu and Kashmir, etc. It is spoken and understood in many countries of Asia, Africa and Europe and a large number of speakers are also present in USA and Australia. The total count of the people, who can speak and understand Urdu, is more than 200 millions. It is the 20th most populous natively spoken language.
Urdu belongs to the Indo-Aryan family and thus is an Indo-European language. It has developed in the present shape under the great influence of Persian, Arabic, Turkish, Punjabi, and other indigenous languages of Indian sub-continent during the Delhi Sultanate and Mughal Empire from 12th to 18th century.

Urdu is the national and one of the two official languages of Pakistan, along with English, and is spoken and understood throughout the country, whereas the state-by-state languages are the provincial languages. Only 8% of Pakistanis have Urdu as their native language, but Urdu is understood all over Pakistan. It is used in education, literature, office and court business. It holds in itself a repository of the cultural and social heritage of the country. Although English is used in most elite circles, and Punjabi has a plurality of native speakers, Urdu is the lingua franca and national language in Pakistan.

Q5. Explain the various stages of development of the Punjabi and Sindhi language?

Answer

Status of Punjabi in Pakistan
Punjabi is the mother tongue of the majority of people in Pakistan. According to 1981 census, the last census for which the figures are available, Punjabi (including Saraiki, Hindko and other variations) is the “commonly spoken in the household” language for 60.43 per cent Pakistanis, followed by Pashto for 13.14 per cent, Sindhi for 11.77 per cent, Urdu for 7.60 per cent and Baluchi for 3.02 per cent. Yet, Punjabi has no official status either in Pakistan or in West Punjab. The medium of teaching in government and private schools in West Punjab is Urdu and, to a lesser extent, English. There is not a single Punjabi medium school in Pakistan, as compared to 36,750 Sindhi medium schools in Sindh and 10,731 Pashto medium schools in the NWFP, per a study in 2001. Except for a very small number of writers and activists, Punjabis are illiterate in their own language – they can neither read nor write Punjabi. The rich tradition of Punjabi literature, going back to the 12th century AD when Baba Farid composed his poetry in a highly developed and sophisticated Punjabi language, has been forgotten. Among the educated classes of Punjabis, instead of pride and affection, contempt and shame for their culture and language is commonly observed.
A closer study of this unique social phenomena of systematic and deliberate denial of their own ethnic identity by West Punjabis, as highlighted by their rejection of Punjabi language, provides many insights into the dynamics of search for an identity by various ethnic and religious groups in the subcontinent during and after the British colonial period and the way power structure has evolved in Pakistan.

The Lack of British Patronization
Prior to the annexation of Punjab by the British in 1849, Punjabi language had developed on the same course followed by most other regional languages in India. Throughout the period of Muslim dominance of India, Persian was the official language of Delhi durbar for conducting the official business until it was officially replaced by English in 1837. The language policies of British Government provided the catalyst for a number of local languages to flourish and develop into their modern and standardized forms. Prior to the British rule, a large number of local schools were functioning in the Punjab. They can be classified as madrassas (for Arabic and Islamic education), maktabs (for Persian education), Gurmukhi schools (for Punjabi language in Gurmukhi script and Sikh religious studies) and patshhalas (Sanskrit schools). In all of these schools, Punjabi was the medium of teaching even though the main purpose was to teach other languages and religious subjects. For a number of years after the British conquest of the Punjab, official circulars and court orders were published in Punjabi. The subject of adopting Urdu or Punjabi as the official vernacular and medium of education in government schools was widely debated among the British officers. A number of them supported Urdu for various reasons, including their fear of resurgence of Sikhs if Punjabi was officially promoted. Most of the low level functionaries in the British governments bureaucracy in the Punjab had come from Urdu speaking areas. They also supported Urdu. Eventually, the British government adopted Urdu for Punjab’s schools and lower courts. Although Punjabi continued to be taught in some private schools in Gurmukhi script to Sikh children, it only served the purpose of religious studies since government employments were available only in Urdu and English. Punjabi missed the boat of British patronization that was the key turning point in the development of other regional languages, e.g., Urdu, Hindi, Bengali, Sindhi, etc.
Sindhi Language

The Sindhi language is spoken by over 53 million people inside Pakistan alone. Originally derived from Sanskrit, it is the official language of the province of Sindh in Pakistan.

Sindhi language evolved over a period of 2400 years. The language of the people of Sindh, after coming in contact with the Aryan, became Indo-Aryan. Sindhi language, therefore, has a solid base of Prakrit as well as Sanskrit, the language of India, with vocabulary from Arabic, Persian, and some Dravidian – descendants from Mediterranean sub-continent. Initially, Sindhi had close contacts with Arabic-speaking Muslims. Therefore the language adopted many of the Arabic words.

Sindhi language is an ancient language spoken in Pakistan and many other parts of the world. It is an Indo-Aryan language spoken by approximately 41 million people in Pakistan, and 12 million people in India; it is the second most spoken language of Pakistan, mostly spoken in the Sindh province. It is a recognized official language in Pakistan, and also an official language in India. Government of Pakistan issues National Identity Cards to its citizens only in two languages; Sindhi and Urdu.

Sindhi language is also greatly influenced by Sanskrit and about 70% of the words in Sindhi are of Sanskrit origin. Sindhi is a very rich language with a vast vocabulary; this has made it a favorite of many writers and so a lot of literature and poetry has been written in Sindhi. It has been the inspiration for Sindhi art, music, literature, culture and the way of life. The language can be written using the Devanagri or Arabic script.

Q6. Elaborate the major social problems of Pakistan.

Answer

Major Problems Facing Pakistan Today

Islamic Republic of Pakistan was established in 1947, a country of 170 million people, full of natural resources and more than 60 years of independence but still not respected in the world community. In less than 30 years of independence, it’s one wing gets separated (Bangladesh). Remaining part till today is living on IMF, World Bank and foreign donations. Majority of the population is living in rural areas without basic necessities of life. It is a country where financial gap between rich and poor is widening day by day. From the last 10 years, extremism is increasing. Whatever happens in the world it is almost understood even before investigations that it will have a link with Pakistan. Almost every kind of problem exists in Pakistan, including electricity load-shedding, bad economy, less educational facilities, less hospitals, inflation and no pure water in many parts. These problems exist in Pakistan right from its independence which as mentioned above was more than sixty years ago.

Despite it being rich on raw resources thus far Pakistan is a developing country with limited development in every era due to the problems it faces. In the following text we will shed some light on some of the major problems faced today by Pakistan as a country.

1. POVERTY:
According to an analysis conducted by the government of Pakistan and published at HEC shows that the poverty has increased roughly from 30% to 40% during the past decade. Consider that if 40% of a country’s population is earning their life below the poverty-line in which the people are deprived of basic necessities of life such as clothing, shelter, food, education and medication, such families and their children will be forced to think of their survival only.

2. ILLITERACY
Literacy is defined as persons aged 15 or above who can “read” and “write”. According to this definition, Pakistan is officially reported to have 50% literacy rate. Which means half of its population is illiterate. With such family backgrounds, inflation, poverty and child labor this rate is expected to increase in future. Even for those who are termed as “Literate” are only able to read and write, which in today’s technology oriented world is still considered as illiteracy. Majority of the people forming the top controlling tier is almost unaware of technologies and technical mindset. Thus, causing the country to adopt the new technologies at a snail’s speed.

3. Energy Crisis:
Electricity is the major problem Pakistan facing today. Electricity in Pakistan is generated, transmitted, distributed and retail supplied by two vertically integrated public sector utilities: Water and Power Development Authority (WAPDA) for all of Pakistan (except Karachi), and the Karachi Electric Supply Corporation (KESC) for the City of Karachi and its surrounding areas. There are around 16 independent power producers that contributes significantly in electricity generation in Pakistan.
For years, the matter of balancing Pakistan’s supply against the demand for electricity has remained a largely unresolved matter. Pakistan faces a significant challenge in revamping its network responsible for the supply of electricity.

4. Corruption and Political Instability
Pakistan is suffering from a fatal problem known as “Establishment”. Every vital department in Pakistan is controlled by the so-called “Establishment”. Establishment is a network of key positions in almost all the departments in the country. This network provides support and safe backing to their “touts” to ensure that they remain in control. The roots of this establishment may very well be deep inside underworld and secret agencies of the dominating nations.

This is probably also the main reason why the political process in Pakistan is not let to prosper. Soon after its inception the sincere and loyal politicians were removed from the main stream and only dummy agents and rubber stamps are put in place, while all the decisions are made outside the country.

5. International Interference
India is typically termed as a conventional enemy to Pakistan. As mentioned before the people of Pakistan need to be trained to think positively about their surroundings. We should learn a lesson from US and Canada’s cross border collaboration to improve their affairs and provide backing, why can’t Pakistan and India enter into such strengthening relationship?

Pakistan can never move forward with its proxy war politics with India and its involvement in the so-called US War on terrorism. It has to strike peace with India and other neighboring countries soon so that it can use its resources for its own people’s welfare and focus on its collective objectives.

Pakistan has more potential to be a developed country earlier than India. It has the resources and talent, yet it seems to sink lower by the day. India with a billion plus population has a million problems to handle.

6. Terrorism:
Terrorism in Pakistan has become a major and highly destructive phenomenon in recent years. The whole world looks at Pakistan, as a land of terrorists. Main reason being an exploitation through the religious leaders and reaction of the military operations both internally as well as externally.

The post-9/11 War on Terrorism in Pakistan has had two principal elements: the government's battle with jihad groups banned after the attacks in New York, and the U.S. pursuit of Al-Qaeda, usually (but not always) in co-operation with Pakistani forces.

8. Overpopulation, Inflation, Unemployment
According to official news, Pakistan has an estimated 2% growth rate which for a country of official population of 160 Million turns out to be roughly around 3.2 Million every year. This alarming growth rate is causing immense pressure on head of the families who are to support them.

Given that about 40% of the population is already living under poverty line and 5.6% of the population is unemployed, the ever growing population of Pakistan is just adding to the problems of the already under pressure nation.

9. Economy Crisis:
In 1947, Pakistan had 30 million people with per capita income of 100$. Agriculture accounted for almost 50% of economic output with hardly any manufacturing, as all industries were located in India. Therefore, it was unable to feed 30 million people and was dependent on PL-480 imports from the USA. From thereon, Pakistan has come a long way.

Today with 170 million people, our per capita income in 2008 was 1000$ which was ten times more. Out of every hundred rupees of our national income, we consume 85 rupees and save only 15 rupees, which means that the amount of money which is available to invest for economic growth and advancement is too little. Because to grow by 6%, you need at least 24-25% investment rate. In 1990, Pakistan's share was 0.2% of the world trade. After 20 years it has come down to 0.12% in a very buoyant world economy.

10. Health Issues:
Pakistan is facing a health crisis with rising rates of heart disease, diabetes, obesity, and other non-communicable diseases which disproportionately affect poor families, with possible side effects of disability and premature death, and worsening poverty as people pay for medical treatment out of their own pockets.
The World Health Organization (WHO) reported 4 million cases of diarrhea, pneumonia, malaria, and skin conditions that had largely resulted from flood-affected conditions. Cholera outbreaks have also been reported from flood-affected areas. From Oct. 15 to 22, WHO reported about 258,000 consultations for pneumonia, diarrhea, and suspected malaria. Furthermore, dreaded diseases such as dengue and Crimean Congo hemorrhagic fevers have been reported from the field, along with measles encephalitis and neonatal tetanus.

Q7. Explain the role of minorities in Pakistan.

Answer

Minorities in Pakistan

Quaid-e-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah made a speech to Pakistan’s first constituent assembly on that day in 1947, which was chaired by a non-Muslim, Joginder Nath Mandal.

In his address to the first Constituent Assembly of Pakistan on 11 August 1947, Muhammad Ali Jinnah said: “You are free; you are free to go to your temples, you are free to go to your mosques or to any other places of worship in the State of Pakistan. You may belong to any religion or caste or creed – that has nothing to do with the business of the State. We are starting with this fundamental principle: that we are all citizens and equal citizens of one State. Now, I think we should keep that in front of us as our ideal and you will find that in course of time Hindus would cease to be Hindus and Muslims would cease to be Muslims, not so in the religious sense because that is the personal faith of each individual, but in the political sense as citizens of the state.”

When Pakistan was created, its Founding Father Muhammad Ali Jinnah endorsed the principles of religious freedom and equal rights for all, irrespective of caste or creed. The succession of constitutions that followed went counter to these ideals, and opened the door to persecution and violence against minorities. Beside blasphemy, Christians and members of other non-Muslim religions have to deal with the problem of forced conversions and marriages.

Pakistan is a plural society with a number of religious, sectarian and ethno-linguistic groups. It is nation of about 162 million people where Muslims represent more than 90 per cent of the total, divided doctrinal lines. As a religious minority Christians face religious, social, constitutional, economic and educational discrimination. In addition to Christians, non-Muslim Pakistanis include Baha’is, Buddhists, Hindus, Jains, Kalasha, Parsees and Sikhs.

Pakistan’s Founding Fathers envisaged a progressive, democratic and tolerant society that retained its Muslim character whilst giving equal rights to its non-Muslim citizens.

The Common Features of Pakistani Culture

Different regions and nationalities have different customs and traditions. That explains the presence of so many cultures throughout the world. But there are also many commonalities among various cultures. Pakistan is a Muslim country and Islam is the dominant feature of Pakistani culture. Islam is against the divisions of people and societies on ethnic, linguistic, or traditional grounds and provides a common framework for uniting its followers in a single nationhood beyond provincial frontiers besides religion the constitution of Pakistan, also provides freedom and benefits to everyone. Following are the main characteristics of Pakistani culture.

Mixed culture

Pakistani culture is a mixed culture. This region has been a melting pot of different cultural traditions since human prehistory. The earliest settlers of the region were part displaced, part mingled with the Aryan invaders. Later on various people of iranian, Afghan, Greek, Arab, Mongolian and turkic origin settled and mingled with local populations. Thus, in spite of the many apparent differences in the customs and traditions of various regions in the country, they also exhibit deep, underlying similarities, known as Pakistani culture.

Social life:

In Pakistan social life is basically simple and modest. Customs and traditions are also simple. A majority of the population lives in combined family system. Respect for the elders is common among all regional and local traditions.

A vast majority of the national population lives in villages, with farming and livestock management being the primary sources of earning their livelihood.

Commerce, industrial works, and the service sector are the major employment sources of the people in urban areas.
Marriage ceremonies are still held in traditional manner. Religious festivals are generally celebrated with passion and devotion throughout the country.

Dress:
Pakistan's national dress is simple but graceful. Men wear shalwar and qamees or kurta. The use of traditional caps and pagri as headwear among men is common. Women generally wear shalwar and qamees for clothes and chador (shawl) for headwear.

Besides, every region has its own style of dress. Embroidered dress is popular with women. But its cutting, colour and design are different. Hence, every dress follows the principle of modesty and parda.

Food:
Food of Pakistani people is quite simple. Bread made from wheat taken with vegetables, various kinds of pulses, is common. Rice with meat is another favorite dish. Milk, lassi, tea, green tea and simple water are the major drinks. However, during marriage ceremonies and other feasts, the provision of more expensive and richer foods and drinks is arranged. Some foods are more popular than others in certain areas due to regional and climatic variations. In khyber pakhunkhwa, for example, because of the cold weather meat and green tea are consumed in larger quantities. In Sindh and Punjab, vegetables, milk and dairy products like yogurt and butter, are consumed avidly. In Baluchistan, lambs, meat, beaf and dry fruits are the favourite food.

Handicraft:
The skill of handicraft is inherited to Pakistan people from ancient times. Modern Pakistan's craftsmen are capable and have a great aesthetic sense. Craftsmanship is generally a family business. Certain crafts are jointly undertaken by men and women.

The city of Gujarat is famous for the craft of paintings on earthenware. The craftsmen of Peshawar city retain the same mastery of the art of engraving on bronze, copper and tin implements as their ancestors. The goldsmiths of Peshawar, Multan, Bahawalpur and Haiderabad are renowned for their work in both gold and silver. Baluchistan and Punjab are renowned for the craft of weaving hand-woven carpet. Pakistanis are also heir to a rich tradition in the handicrafts of embroidery and the decoration of fabrics.
Sports and Fares

Sporting events and fairs are important aspects of Pakistani culture. In various regions of the country fairs are held with the changing of seasons and on eve of crops cutting or on occasions of important events in the lives of sufis saints. People from all walks of life come to participate in these fairs. Some of these events are quite colorful.

Q9. Write a note balochi, pushtoo and kashmiri language,

Answer

Balochi

Balochi is a member of the Indo-Iranian branch of the Indo-European language family. It is the main language of Balochistan, a province of Pakistan. It is estimated that about 7 million people speak Balochi as their first or second language. They are spread over a vast area encompassing southeastern Iran, southwestern Pakistan, southwestern Afghanistan, and southern Turkmenistan. There is a large Baloch community in Oman and the United Arab Emirates.

Balochi’s origin is not known but it is hypothesized that the Baloch people may have migrated from their original home east or southeast of the central Caspian region in the 7th-8th centuries AD. Their language is thought to have evolved between 200-700 BC from a lost language spoken on the territory of the Parthian Empire. This may help explain why Balochi’s closest relatives today are Kurdish and Persian.

Prior to 1947, Balochistan’s official languages were Persian and English. In 1948, with the incorporation of Balochistan into the newly created Pakistan, Balochi was replaced by Urdu as the national language.

None of the countries in which Balochi is spoken have given it official status or use it in their educational systems. Even though Balochi is the primary language of Balochistan, it is not taught in schools due to lack of teachers, lack of parental support and competing pressures from other language groups. Although there are newspapers, magazines, and literature in Balochi, literacy rate in the language vis-à-vis. Radio has played an important role in promoting comprehension among the three dialects of the language. Today, Balochi remains primarily the language of the home and of the local community.

Pashto

Pashto, also known as Pushto, or Pashtu, is a member of the Indo-Iranian branch of the Indo-European language family. It is spoken by 42-45 million ethnic Pashtuns in Afghanistan and Pakistan. It is also spoken in India, Iran, Tajikistan, United Arab Emirates, and U.K.

Pashto is spoken by an estimated 8 million people in Afghanistan. It was made the national language of Afghanistan in 1936 by royal decree. Today, it is a co-official language of Afghanistan along with Dari. Of the two languages, Dari enjoys greater prestige, hence most Pashtuns learn to speak Dari, but few Dari speakers learn Pashto. However, because of the political power of the Pashtuns, Pashto is a compulsory subject in Dari-medium schools, and is widely used as a language of government administration. Nevertheless, it failed to replace Dari as the major language of business and higher education.

Pakistan

Pashto is spoken by 9.6 million people in Pakistan, but it has no official status and is not taught in schools. Pashtun children are educated in Urdu.

Kashmiri

Kashmiri, also known as Koshur, belongs to the Northwestern group of the Indo-Aryan branch of the Indo-European language family. It is spoken primarily in the Jammu and Kashmir state of India. It has about 4.6 million speakers, 4.3 million of whom reside in India and 105,000 in Pakistan.

Kashmiri language and literature experienced two major influences. The earliest was that of Vedic Sanskrit. The later influences came from Persian and Arabic which began after the Muslim invasions and large-scale conversion to Islam.

Kashmiri is one of the 22 official languages of India. It is the majority language in multilingual and multi-ethnic Jammu and Kashmir State. Kashmiri is used as a medium of instruction in primary and middle schools. Some Kashmiri speakers use English or Hindi as a second language. Only recently has Kashmiri started to be taught in Indian universities. Nevertheless, literacy rates are relatively high.

Speakers of Kashmiri are predominantly fluent in a second language, typically Hindi/Urdu. Many Kashmiris also speak English. The language is known for its rich literary tradition, particularly for its poetry, dating from the 12th century A.D. Kashmiri is the medium of much of mass communication, such as newspapers, radio programs, and films.
